- agreed to by Petitioner and Respondent.
 - proposed by Petitioner Respondent. Until ordered by the court, expressions of agreement mean proposals and “we” means “I.”
 - temporary; the completed paragraphs apply until the case is finished. (If you are asking for a temporary order on parenting issues, you should include as many of these parenting plan topics as you will need to carry your family through until all parenting issues are resolved.)
 - final; the completed paragraphs should be included in the court’s final order.
- (2) Is there an existing plan on file with the court?

 - A joint physical custody arrangement may result in denial of cash assistance under the Employment Support Act, Title 35A, Chapter 3, of the Utah Code.
 - The objectives of a parenting plan are to:
 - provide for the children’s physical care and emotional stability;
 - provide for the children’s changing needs in a way that minimizes the need to change the parenting plan;
 - minimize the children’s exposure to conflict between the parents;
 - state the authority and responsibilities of each parent to the children;
 - encourage the parents to meet their responsibilities to their children through agreement rather than judicial decision; and
 - protect the best interests of the children.
 - A parenting plan must include provisions for:
 - resolving disputes between the parents;

- allocating decision-making authority;
- residence of the children; and
- notice and parenting responsibilities if a parent relocates.
- Each parent must provide the other with their current address, telephone numbers, email address, and other virtual parent-time information unless the court orders otherwise. Each parent must inform the other parent and the court of any change in that information as soon as reasonably possible.
- Each parent must follow the parenting plan even if the other does not. If a parent does not follow the parenting plan, the court may find that parent in contempt of court.
- Either parent may file a Petition to Modify Child Custody when there has been a substantial change in circumstances such that it is in the best interest of the children that the plan be changed by the court.
